History and Geography of the Bible

Israel and Mesopotamia are very important land bridges that connects 3 different continents between the deserts of the Middle East as well as the land-masses separated by the Mediterranean Sea.

Under David and Solomon during the United Kingdom age from 1020 to 922, the borders of Israel extended the furthest they ever had and ever have since. This is Israel's Golden Age where it was the most powerful and wealthy time of its history.

In 722, the country separated into the northern kingdom of Israel and the southern kingdom of Judah ruled by different groups. They did not always get along despite being related ethnically.

Around 722, Assyria wiped out Israel. The kingdom of Judah pays money to Assyria to avoid being destroyed.

In succession, several large powers would take over each other. During the time of the Babylonian rule around 586 causing the exile and destruction of the Temple of Solomon. Those exiled were serving as slaves in Babylon. Around 536, the Persian empire ruled. The difference of the Persian rule was that the exiles were allowed to return home. They were released to return to their life in Israel, but they were taxed heavily by the Persian empire. Around 333, the Hellenistic period took over the Persian period until around 63 through the intertestamental stretch of time when Alexander the Great marched across the giant Persian empire until his death at age 33 due to sickness. The Maccabean family does resist the Hellenistic rule, but did not fight back.

The Herodian family worked with the Roman family that would rule on behalf of the Romans in that region.

The Second Temple Period refers to the period after the exile until 70 C.E. when the temple was destroyed and replaced with the Dome of the Rock, a mosque.

The Diaspora took place beginning at the start of the exile. Diaspora literally means something like “scattering.”

Sumney's Key Terms: Ch 1, 2, 4

Biblical Books: Genesis to Deuteronomy

In order and spelled correctly

Canonization of the New Testament

The first Christians existed with no New Testament at all. They had proclamation, preaching, and a message. It takes time to have an authoritative canon.

Eusebius of Caesarea – One of the original early church fathers in the early 4th century. Wrote “Church History” the history of the church in the first three centuries. First one.

Athanasius of Alexandria – Bishop of Alexandria in Egypt. Lots of churches exist in Alexandria. In 367 C.E., he writes a letter to the churches with a list of books he considers authoritative, which is identical to what is in the modern New Testament Bible.

Not until the Reformation, during the time of Martin Luther, do we have a major agreement on what books should be included in the New Testament.

Translation and Publication

- Targum: Hebrew to Aramaic (5th c. B.C.E.)
- Septuagint (LXX): Hebrew to Greek (3rd c. B.C.E.)
- Vulgate: Hebrew and Greek to Latin (5th c. C.E.)

Aramaic was the language used in exile by the Judahites. When they returned home, they brought Aramaic back with them. The new generation did not speak Hebrew, so they needed to translate everything in Hebrew to Aramaic.

Septuagint means 70 (Latin). This was after the time of Alexander of Macedonia, so he brought the Greek language with him when he was conquering the world. This caused the Greek language to spread under the Hellenistic rulers. Seventy Hebrew scholars were called in in order to translate from Hebrew to Greek the Torah (probably still just the Torah at this time).

Jerome was the translator. Vulgate means “base” or “common”. It was the translation into the common language, which in Rome was Latin. It became the authoritative text for the Roman Catholic church.

English Translation

In 1382, John Wycliffe makes the first English translation of the Bible based on the Vulgate.

In 1525, William Tyndale made the first English translation of the New Testament from the Greek version, which became the basis for the King James Version.

Formal Correspondence is a Word For Word translation from the source language to the destination language. It is nearly impossible to do this in translation, so most focus on this but also include Dynamic Equivalent translations.

Dynamic Equivalent is a Thought For Thought translation from the source language to the destination language. This is trying to get the same idea, but without needing to match sentence structure and vocabulary.

Textual Criticism

Textual Criticism is the study of ancient manuscripts.

Notable manuscripts are the Dead Sea Scrolls discovered in the 1940's that date back to around the 1st c. B.C.E., which were extremely identical to the 10th c. C.E. manuscripts.

Intentional Changes: The ending or endings of Mark.

The original ending ended at “. . . they were afraid.”

The shorter ending ended at “. . . they were afraid. And all that they have been commanded them they told briefly to those around Peter. And afterward Jesus himself sent out through them, from east to west, the sacred and imperishable proclamation of eternal salvation.”

The longer ending ended even longer with several paragraphs more.
